FROM THE DESK OF THE EDITOR IN CHIEF...

Dear South Carolina Law Review Alumni:

On behalf of Volume 66, I am pleased to send you the South Carolina Law Review's fall 2014 newsletter, highlighting some of the Law Review's accomplishments and providing information about the Volume 66 Symposium and other events we have planned.

Beginning in April and throughout the summer, members of the Board of Editors worked to prepare for Volume 66 by reviewing and selecting articles, planning for the Symposium, and writing case summaries for our Fourth Circuit Survey. Members also compiled a list of topics from which our 2L staff members have been drafting their notes to be considered for publication in our annual Survey of South Carolina Law.

Thanks to the work of our Article Selection Committee, chaired by the Executive Articles Editor Madison Walker, we were excited to fill the first two issues of Volume 66 in early July. Our articles cover a wide range of topics, including family law, immigration law, tort law, employment law, and criminal law. All of our members have enjoyed working with these articles and learning about these areas of law. This summer, the Law Review administered the Joint Journal Writing Competition, and we appreciate the work done by Associate Editors-in-Chief Taylor Pipkin and Harrison Williams in managing the competition. At the conclusion of the competition, we were pleased to select twenty-eight new members.

The Law Review welcomed Volume 66's new editorial staff during our August orientation, at which we were honored to hear from several distinguished alumni. The Honorable Joseph F. Anderson, Jr. and Dean Robert Wilcox delivered insightful remarks about their time on Law Review and emphasized the importance of our journal. Throughout the fall semester, both our second and third year members have worked very hard on behalf of the Law Review, but have also enjoyed building camaraderie between the classes. Members participated in the Women in Law Halloween Carnival and other Pro Bono events. Thank you to Alysja Garansi, Jennifer Jokerst, Mary Cothoneau Eldridge, and Kayla Porter for their help in planning the Law Review's table at the carnival. The Law Review also participated in the Annual Hunger is NOT a Crock (Pot) event, and many thanks to Keegan Miller for preparing our entry. In November, we held a Wrap Party at Thirsty Fellow, where several members were honored for their contributions to the Law Review.

We hope that you will plan to attend the Volume 66 Symposium on February 19 and 20. Thanks to our Symposium Editors Brittany Lins and Matthew Orville for all they have done to plan this event. Following the Symposium on Friday, February 20, we will be hosting an alumni event at Cola's. All of our members enjoyed meeting alumni last year and hearing about their experiences on the Law Review. You will be receiving more information about these events after the first of the year, and we hope you will attend.

If you have any questions, please contact me by telephone at (864) 979-9405 or by email at eic@sclawreview.org. Thank you so much for your interest and support of the South Carolina Law Review.

Sincerely,

Emily I. Bridges

PEER REVIEWED SCHOLARSHIP MARKETPLACE (PRSM)

Whit McGreevy, Volume 66's Peer Review Editor, has been working to raise awareness about PRSM throughout the legal community. Whit is currently locating appropriate reviewers for articles that have been submitted through PRSM. In addition, he has been working to publicize this program and will be creating a letter to send to top law reviews across the country describing the benefits of PRSM membership.

Volume 66 Holds New Member Orientation

On Thursday, August 14, and Friday, August 15, at the University of South Carolina School of Law, the South Carolina Law Review's Editorial Board hosted Orientation for the newly selected members of Volume 66. All members of the Board of Editors were very excited to meet our twenty-eight new members.

These new members were welcomed by Dean Robert Wilcox, who spoke about his experiences as a member of the Law Review. Dean Wilcox discussed his memories of his time on the Law Review and how much he enjoyed not only assisting in ensuring that high-quality articles were published but also spending time with his fellow members. The new members learned more about the different areas of the Law Review as well as information regarding their student notes from Jennifer Jokerst, the Executive Student Works Editor. The session wrapped up with remarks from the Honorable Joseph F. Anderson, Jr., who focused on the impact the Law Review can have and how wide an audience it reaches. Finally, a Welcome Reception was held at Thirsty Fellow, and we were very pleased to have Judge Anderson join us.

On Friday, the new members received research, editing, and Bluebook training from Madison Walker, the Executive Articles Editor. The new members were also able to meet individually with their spade groups and practice spading several footnotes while getting to know their fellow new members.

Our Board of Editors has already enjoyed spending time and working with our newest staff members on our first two books. We have been very impressed with their spades as well as the progress they have made on their student notes. It is clear the Article Selection Committee will have many excellent notes from which to choose for publication in the Survey of South Carolina Law.

VOLUME 66 SYMPOSIUM:“Water-Lawgged”: The Muddy Relationship between Water Law, the Environment, and Economic Development

The South Carolina Law Review is hosting a Symposium in 2015 titled “Water-Lawgged”: The Muddy Relationship between Water Law, the Environment, and Economic Development. The event will begin at 6:00 pm on Thursday, February 19th, with a keynote address by Stanford University Professor Buzz Thompson, a leading expert in environmental and natural resources law and policy. On Friday, February 20th, there will be three panel discussions. The first will focus on the effects of water law on the environment and economic development. The second will focus on the evolving riparian and transitional issues affecting intrastate water allocation. The third panel will discuss ongoing conflicts in the area of interstate water allocation. These talks will be a great platform for the diverse group of panelists to provide a wide range of perspectives on these issues. Additionally, on Friday there will also be an address from Duke University Professor Jim Salzman, a leading scholar on environmental issues. We are extremely excited about this event as it promises to offer timely discussions of many current issues that have vast implications on the law across the country, our environment, and the development of our economy. Finally, the Symposium will offer attendees six hours of CLE credit.

For more information about Volume 66’s Symposium, as well as sponsorship opportunities, please feel free to contact our Symposium Editors, Brittany Lins and Matt Orville, at symposium@sclawreview.org. You can register for the Symposium by visiting https://secure.touchnet.net/C21544_ustores/web/ and clicking on “School of Law” on the right-hand column.
